HOW TO USE SCENTS

A Woman Should Be Nest as Well-Toned Fiddle

BEFORE USING HER PERFUMES

If you want to be really exquisitely est and dainty you must begin with our underwear. Every tiny hole in must be darned as soon as it ears. There must be no fraved as on your petticoats, and so hanging as or turn embroidery on your white sirts. Every article must be spotlessly sun, no matter how plain, and though stehing is admissible a rent is not to with of.

edeled Dress Skirts Dressmakers who are requested to remodel last year's skirts that are made of leatiles too rich and expensive to cast saids use various methods in transforming these skirts into models now in vogus. Some cut them into bias flounces, which they put upon new bell skirts or those closely gored; others add double breadths in the back made of similar, matching or contrasting fabrics, and others again open the skirt down the front in directoirs fashion over a gored underskirt or insert a panel which they frame in gimp or passementeric.

NEW STYLES IN WAISTS.

well shaken in the air and carefully ushed, so that every atom of dust is put to flight before the skirt is hung away among scented pads, and the bodice must be spread out carefully to air be fore it is folded up in perfumed wadding. The woman who glories in a reputation for genuine niceness sees that her hair is thoroughly clean and well cared for before she thinks of doing it up in a scented silk cap, just as she sees that her hands are perfectly clean before she har rings.

The woman who glories in a reputation band of silk or velvet. Some of the rich brocaded skirts are wholly untrimmed, and in making up these handsome skirts the silk lining and crinoline are cut in breadths exactly like the outside, seamed up together and then silk faced.

her hands are perfectly clean before she puts on her rings.

A delicate, flower-like perfume emanating from the immaculate belongings of a refined woman is altogether irresistible; but if the spotless perfection of rain-washed blossoms isn't carried out in all the trivalities of your costume, you had much better leave off the perfume accommaniment. Somehow that you had much better leave off the per-fume accompaniment. Somehow that faint flowery suggestion always attracts a second glance, and it is that searching second glance that shows up missing shoe buttons, fringed skirts, dusty ruffles and budly-arranged hair, which seem strangely incongruous with that dainty fragrance. Be sure that every article of your wardrobe is irreproachable before you tamper with scent bugs and sachet powders.

Miss Johnstone Bennett, so they say.

Miss Johnstone Bennett, so they say, has made ciganiness her fast, and she is reported as saying that she likes to "radinte" cleanliness. It wouldn't be a bad idea for some of her admiring sisters to follow her example. It may seem mannish to eschew perfumes and swear by soap and starch, but it's ever so much nicer than using scents plentifully to disguise the lack of them.

Now, don't misunderstand the moral! It is not that you should not use perfumes, but that you should not spend your time making scent bags of sundry sizes until your menting is all done, and sizes until your menting is all done, and that you should not spend money on sachet powders and perfumed waters when your gloves and boots are shabby.

Light Fabrics and How to Make Them-The new French and Venetian challes The new French and Venetian challes are exceedingly fresh and tempting to the eye after the protracted exhibit of heavy winter fabrics, and with their dainty tinted grounds strewn with flowers and foliage adorn the shop windows as harbingers of baimy summer. These sheer and dainty wools are made into exceedingly attractive toilets in empire, pompadour and semi-Greek styles, the latter models showing long, graceful draperies arranged over very closely gored foundation skirts of silk or batists. The pompadour dresses are cut with flowing skirts, the bediess in short-waisted style, and cut out square in the nock front and back, with love or velvet brotolics beyond, that spread above the tops of the full sleeves. Among other pompadour dresses are those of those of musiin made up over skirts of hatiste, and of stamped "Persian game" over foundations of moire the color of the flower in the game. If a rather flowing effect is desired the gored understart is made of lines back motre that is wid for the purpose.

Fashion not so Capricious as Formerly. The season thus far has been so disagreeable, with chilly winds, cloudy skies and sudden changes, that very many of the beautiful things for warm weather wear have been kept out of eight by the careful importer, who wisely holds a portion of his treasurers in abeyance knowing how quickly nov.

Notes of the Modes. Among the prettiest fancy wraps for the summer are the Marie Antoinette capes of lace, either black or white,

PRETTY FINISHINGS FOR NECKBANDS.

They have long scarf ends that fasten at the belt and fall to the skirt hem. In adjusting this little cape one or two handsome jeweled pins are used to keep them in place. These capes only reach to the elbow and are finished with a frill at the neck.

Among recent importations are very handsome dresses with triple skirts. These skirts consist of three wide flounces shaped without gathers and mounted on a silk foundation. Each flounce laps deeply on the one below it. Crepon skirts in this style made by Worth have each flounce narrowly edged with white guipure.

One of the latest novelties for dress waists and sleeves is silk woven in puffs, each puff an inch or two in width and separated by bands of striped satin. For example, white China silk puffs are gathered to bands an inch wide of alternate white and pink satin, each stripe having black lines on the edge.

The fashion of trimming under petticoats with lace is not to be recom-mended. Even the best of lace soon frays out and is anything but an orna-ment. The plainer silk skirts with hemmed and tucked ruffles are really as pretty as the lace trimmed ones and are in every way more desirable. The square shaped Russian sleeve cap is giving place to the Vandyke shape, which tapers to a sharp point and ends just above the elbow. These caps are plaited very full at the top to give them prominence, and are often added to open iackets The "Princess May." which comes to us from London is a high, round walst to be worn over the dress instead of a cape or jacket. A handsome waist of this kind is of black antin ribbons used lengthwise and joined by rows of jet galeon.

The trimming of hats alike on both sides is as popular as it was last autumn. "Rabbit's ears" of velvet or ribbon or some other high trimming, as longstemmed flowers or accordion plaited velvet, are very much the mode.

Heliotrope is a color as pretty as it is popular, but at the same time it should be remembered that there are few shades more trying to most complexions.

A BEAUTIFUL WESTERN PORTESS.

In the broad fields of literature and newspaper work there are many busy helpers whose inspiration lies in the home. The daintiest bits of verse, the best descriptive writing and the cleverest stories often come from the pens of women who have a home life as charm-

Minnie Thomas Boyce is one of these,

Although yet in her early twenties,
Mrs. Boyce has written many poems, short stories and sketches for the leading western papers. Much of her work has been for the Chicago Inter Ocean. She has contributed to the Indianapolis Sentinel and the Indianapolis News and is a delegate from Indiana to the World's fair press convention. She is also a member of the National Press league. Humorous sketches and stories of Hoosier life are specially Mrs. Boyce's forte, although her poems for children are eagerly sought for and liberally remunerated by the va-rious periodicals for which she contrib-

Mrs. Boyce's home life is a very de-lightful one. She is the mother of a love-ly boy, to whom she devotes much of her ly boy, to whom she devotes much of her time, and is the center of a charming circle of people whom she delights by her ready wit and gracious hospitality. She is, mereover, a beautiful woman, and so can summon to her aid in her work a treasure both in mind and body.

It is a very pleasant thing to 'sow of talented home women. To read of them below and encourages the access of women.

helps and encourages the scores of women who feel themselves to be cryable of more thought than is required for the daily routine of house and home work, yet who dread to try their wings for lack of the word of encouragement.

TACT.

What We All Appreciate, but Very Few Once upon a time two little girls were talking together, one of whom was a year or two older than the other. Child No. 1 inquired, "How many valentines had you this year?" The answer was rue-fully, "None at all." Without a moment's besitation and with an admiring smile the first said, "Oh, are you growing too old for valentines?"

That was exquisite tact. To be grown up is the height of youthful ambition, and the "left out" girl was thus instant-ly transported by her very neglect to a coveted pre-sminence, while the little belle set herself deferentially saide by belle set herself deferentially saide by reason of her belleship.

Dr. Holmes says, "Good breeding is surface Christianity." And good breeding is one name for tact. Its other name is thoughtfulness. Those who boast in the frequent assertion, "I haven't a particle of tact, you know," appear to think that the lack implies a certain blunt honesty. It implies selfishness. Anthony Trollope declared once that we never forgot what we really cared to rememfroliope declared once that we never forgot what we really cared to remem-ber; that we only have poor memories in certain lines, and because those are sub-jects of small interest to us. It is cer-tainly astonishing how few among one's acquaintance have that blessed faculty of setting one at one's ease; of regarding others first and themselves last. If a man or a woman be popular, it is on this account. One can't be popular without it, and one can't be altogether disliked—no matter how unworthy in other ways -who has cultivated the gift. It may be a very tiny gift at first and largely

It should not develop into fussiness, which is most wearing and tiresome. It should not go so far as inquisitiveness, although it must run along the lines of friendly interest. "I think Miss B. is a very graceless person," complained an acquaintance one day. "She said to me just now, 'Why, I always supposed you were a Methodist.' After all the years we've lived in the same town she might pay me the compliment of finding out where I went to church." It is the implied flattery that makes us—the wisest of us—purrunder grace-ful attention and feel at least the inclination to scratch if it is pointedly with-hold. Nobody really fancies being rubbed the wrong way, even by a good, kind hand.

There is a vast deal of talk in the world about ingratitude. Isn't the foundation of that complaint laid upon the truth that not careless favors nor rough good nature can excite a giow of thankfulness as may the little deeds of kindness. the little words of love that the old
